

One day in a small city in an immense galaxy, Everything and Nothing met. Everything, as usual was looking for activities to do. It was difficult for him to choose because he liked to do everything, with everyone, everywhere.

On an ordinary day, he was at the cinema with an ordinary friend, watching an ordinary movie until he saw a girl who wasn't just an ordinary girl. She didn't watch the movie, she didn't eat, she did nothing. She was Nothing. Everything fell in love with her. Everything got up to talk to her and tell her everything. And she said nothing. Suddenly, Nothing got up and they went together to an ordinary park on a night that would never be an ordinary night. Maybe you think: How Everything would fall in love with Nothing, if is nothing? Because Everything had the illusion of finding something in Nothing. Nothing can really be without nothing. He couldn't be without Nothing. Or nothing was at all. Nothing could be an illusion. Everything was happy to have found his other half. Because opposites attract. And at the end of the night, strange as it may seem, Nothing smiled before saying goodbye to Everything.
